Joe Lee Johnson Elementary School needed a quiet place where students with intellectual disabilities could have a soothing place that they could be one with themselves. The Privee's high walls and canopy, gave the child a space they could call their own, eliminating all visual and acoustical distractions. Alternatively the Privee's unique and "cool" design also offered students a reward environment. The Privee's large, soft cushion became a place that students felt at home while at school. Offering a comfortable place to read a book or do school work.
