In 1984, three men came together to share their vision for well-built, durable, reliable, forward-thinking furniture. They were not a company or a consortium; they were three men born in the same village in Italy that shared the same passion, values, and beliefs.

Over the years, this personal commitment and attention to detail has become the driving force behind the Borgo brand. It is this personal commitment that our name, Borgo, is derived from. Borgo means village in Italian. A common phrase shared amongst individuals is, "It takes a village to raise a child." After all, this drive for true perfection can only be achieved with the personal commitment of everyone at Borgo and this commitment can only start in one place, at home.

With every chair we design and build, we imagine the environment it will be in and the way it will serve the space. Ultimately, every space has its own story to tell. It is our goal to create the seating solution that best expresses each environment's narrative by working with the designers, the architects, and the end user.

We take pride in each project, as our seating is an extension and showcase of who we are at Borgo: Italian philosophy and design, North American ingenuity, and responsive customization.
